MORE THAN JUST CHILD’S PLAY ...
CHILDREN LEARN WHAT THEY LIVE

Children who live with criticism, learn to condemn.

Children who live with hostility,
learn to fight.

Children who live with ridicule,
learn to be shy.

Children who live with shame,
learn to be guilty.

Children who live with tolerance,
learn to be patient.

Children who live with encouragement, learn confidence.

Children who live with praise, learn to appreciate.

Children who live with fairness, learn justice.

Children who live with approval, learn to like themselves.

Children who live with acceptance and friendship, learn to find love in the world.
Many people have asked the question why does Cumann na mBunscol need a Strategic Plan. After a third of a century it is very appropriate for Cumann na mBunscol to review itself and its work and to set out a strategic way ahead. In that understanding, Cumann na mBunscol was particularly keen to:

- Build on its achievements to date
- Respond to the many and significant changes in the Ireland of the 21st century
- Provide a bright and prosperous future in Gaelic games for the up-and-coming generations of Irish children
- Create positive attitudes towards our national culture and heritage
- Support the teaching of Gaelic games in a developmentally appropriate and inclusive manner

The importance of the work of Cumann na mBunscol knows no boundaries for children, schools, the GAA and the country as a whole. Cumann na mBunscol exists because the GAA exists. Cumann na mBunscol works within a formal constitution and has a structure that reflects that of the GAA overall.

Primary schools can survive without the GAA but the GAA can’t survive without primary schools. The 2,900 schools that participate in Cumann na mBunscol are spread across the island of Ireland. As a result Cumann na mBunscol has a number of target markets, e.g. children, teachers, parents and others in the GAA.

Our Strategic Plan outlines many ways in which our Gaelic games etc. can be promoted to better effect. It is vital that both Cumann na mBunscol and the GAA work hand-in-glove at National, Provincial, County and local/Club levels.

Little did Tom Garry, Peadar Mac Craith, Martin Kitterick and Pat Guthrie realize when they were setting up a national body in 1971 to promote Gaelic games in Primary Schools that Cumann na mBunscol would become the largest sports organisation within the primary education system in Ireland.

We are very fortunate in Cumann na mBunscol to have committee members who are full of enthusiasm and very progressive in their thoughts and actions. Over the years as a result of their hard work, all 32 counties and the London, Hertfordshire & Warwickshire Primary Schools’ GAA Boards have well organised committees comprising of Primary Schools’ teachers who promote and organise Gaelic games for the primary schools in their counties. Several children receive national acclaim through the Mini-Sevens exhibition games at half-time during major GAA matches. Some children would never have been introduced to Gaelic games only for Primary Schools.

Boys’ and girls’ football, hurling and camogie, handball and rounders are the games promoted by each County Committee. Some counties also organise athletics, quizzes and other projects of a GAA/Educational content e.g. the Gaelic Telecom Awards and the O’Neill’s Awards.
INTRODUCTION

The success of Cumann na mBunscol lies in the development and delivery of a wide programme of activities across each county. However we cannot rest on our laurels. In recent years the following programmes were developed but are still in their infancy stages:

- promotion of indoor hurling and football
- the “Young Whistlers” referees programme
- building a presence in Britain.

With time and commitment the above will become as well established as our leagues, athletics, quizzes etc. However in order to make this possible we will have to make Cumann na mBunscol more attractive to our teachers and especially our female teachers as volunteerism and male teachers seem to be on the decline. We will also have to address the growing numbers of ethnic minority populations. Primary Schools are an ideal location to welcome and integrate ethnic minorities into our Irish culture and games.

There are many challenges facing Gaelic games and we have to respond effectively to these ongoing changes and needs. They include:

- Unprecedented economic prosperity and the effects this has had on volunteerism
- The growing numbers of ethnic minority populations
- A sedentary lifestyle which has led to an alarming rate of childhood obesity
- The dramatic population shifts which result in a sense of not belonging
- Attractiveness of other professional sports. We have to ensure that Gaelic games and their uniqueness are not swamped or pushed aside by others who are more powerful than us in some ways.
- Fewer teachers becoming involved in after school activities due to family constraints
- Too much emphasis on competition. We should be encouraging participation as this will make Gaelic games more inclusive rather than exclusive.

I would like to thank everyone who contributed to the compilation of our Strategic Plan. There was widespread consultation and views were sought from many people involved in the GAA family. A special thank you to Mark Conway, Niall Laird and the National Committee of Cumann na mBunscol who met on numerous occasions to prepare a draft on our Strategic Plan. Mile buiochas freisin to Paul Duggan and Pat McGivern who played a pivotal role with Mark Conway in the early stages of our Strategic Plan.

We should all embrace the Strategic Plan because Cumann na mBunscol has a significant role to play in the promotion of our Gaelic games and culture. President Mary McAleese was very much aware of this when she made the following statement at our National Awards a few years ago: “On a September Sunday in Croke Park, when we watch the cream of hurlers and footballers, male and female, it is worth reminding ourselves where it all starts, where the seeds are sown. Cumann na mBunscol can lay claim to a significant part of the credit for the dynamism that typifies Gaelic games all over Ireland.”

CUMANN NA MBUNSCOL:
THE STORY SO FAR

Origins
Cumann na mBunscol was established in 1971 with the aim of developing as a national body to promote Gaelic games in Ireland’s primary schools. For its first decade it was concentrated in Munster and Leinster but now has Coiste in all 32 Counties and in Britain. From its minimalist beginnings it has developed a presence from the very local to the national levels, becoming the largest sporting organization within Ireland’s primary education sector. It has also achieved a position of respect within the GAA, educational; business; and government sectors.

Role and remit
The role of Cumann na mBunscol is to promote, in an atmosphere of fun and enjoyment, the national games of Ireland within primary education. It works across a full spectrum of Gaelic games, i.e. boys and girls football; hurling; camogie; rounders; and handball. In also promoting athletics, Cumann na mBunscol also holds true to a focus of the original GAA. It has a “market base” of almost 2,900 primary schools across Ireland. Those schools range in size from just a few to 1,000 or more pupils and can vary greatly in terms of their settings and the scope and quality of their facilities, both sporting and educational.

Structure
Cumann na mBunscol works within a formal constitution and has a structure that reflects that of the GAA overall with an integrated County; Provincial; and National hierarchy. Each County has its Management Committee, elected annually at an AGM of all participating schools. Provincial Committees are in turn elected by the Counties on an annual basis. Finally a National Committee is elected annually by delegates from the Counties and Provinces.

Performance
The main strategic success of Cumann na mBunscol over the past third-of-a-century has been its growth and increased strength throughout Ireland. During that time its landmark achievements have included:

- development and delivery of a wide programme of activities across each county
- development of the Mini-Sevens exhibition games at half-time during major GAA matches
- establishment of annual awards schemes (currently sponsored by Gaelic Telecom and O’Neills)
- promotion of indoor hurling and football
- the “Young Whistlers” referees programme
- building a presence in Britain

The 2,900 schools that participate in Cumann na mBunscol are spread across Ireland as follows:

- Ulster: 32%
- Munster: 30%
- Leinster: 20%
- Connacht: 18%
CUMANN NA MBUNSCOL: THE STORY SO FAR

Whilst Cumann na mBunscol has effectively led the way in the equal promotion of Gaelic games for girls, the national pattern remains one where the boys’ games have primacy (although in both Ulster and Connacht, girls’ football is stronger than boys hurling):

Cumann na mBunscol has achieved a great deal. But it still has more to do. That includes more of the same ... and new, additional work. For Cumann na mBunscol how things are done is as important as what is done. This Plan aims to show how all this can be taken forward.

Where Cumann na mBunscol Fits In

THE WORLDS CUMANN NA MBUNSCOL WORKS IN

What we mean by this

Cumann na mBunscol does not operate in a vacuum. Neither is it just an end in itself. It is, rather, a means of helping achieve a whole series of important aspirations and objectives. Cumann na mBunscol wants to fit comfortably and effectively within its various contexts ... to respond effectively to ongoing changes and needs ... and to deliver value to, in particular, the primary school children of Ireland.

It’s important therefore that it has a clear understanding of what those contexts are. Part of our strategy development process thus focused on progressing that understanding. There are three contexts particularly critical for Cumann na mBunscol – Ireland the country; primary education; and the GAA.

Ireland: as it is and as it’s changing

For most of the lifetime of Cumann na mBunscol Ireland was a place of limited opportunity and wealth, a place that many of its dynamic young people wanted to leave rather than remain in. It was a country of a slower pace and where traditional institutions; beliefs; and standards held sway. Ireland was effectively a series of small places, in many ways isolated from each other and the rest of the world. Parts of it were also consumed by the conflict that really began to rage around about the time Cumann na mBunscol was founded.

Over the past decade in particular many of Ireland’s traditions, good and not-so-good alike, have been swept away. Chief amongst the features of the new Ireland are:

• unprecedented economic prosperity and wealth (although not for everyone) leading to:
  - parents/adults with no spare time
  - dramatically increased childminding
  - a focus on consumerism
  - people wanting/insisting on the “best in class”

Ireland: as it is and as it’s changing

For most of the lifetime of Cumann na mBunscol Ireland was a place of limited opportunity and wealth, a place that many of its dynamic young people wanted to leave rather than remain in. It was a country of a slower pace and where traditional institutions; beliefs; and standards held sway. Ireland was effectively a series of small places, in many ways isolated from each other and the rest of the world. Parts of it were also consumed by the conflict that really began to rage around about the time Cumann na mBunscol was founded.

Over the past decade in particular many of Ireland’s traditions, good and not-so-good alike, have been swept away. Chief amongst the features of the new Ireland are:

• unprecedented economic prosperity and wealth (although not for everyone) leading to:
  - parents/adults with no spare time
  - dramatically increased childminding
  - a focus on consumerism
  - people wanting/insisting on the “best in class”

• growing ethnic minority populations
• more sedentary lifestyles (children preferring play-stations; computer games; etc) and associated obesity and other health issues
• population shifts; growing towns and cities ... and some acute inner city problems; much less focus on attachment-to-place
• growing community apathy ... and a decline in volunteering generally
• dramatic changes in social and kinship patterns and a diminution in traditional authority
• Ireland now firmly fixed in a global economy and society

• Nearly 5.9 million people now live in Ireland ... an increase of almost 1.7 million since 1961: the Republic’s population grew by 8% in 2002-06
• The country is now about two-thirds urban and one-third rural
• In 2002-06 County Meath alone grew by nearly 29,000 people ... the equivalent of the entire population of County Leitrim
• Average household sizes are now 2.7 (NI) and 2.9 (Republic): in 1926 the average was 4.5
• In 2005 alone over 100,000 new houses were built in Ireland
• By 2020 one person-in-five in Ireland is likely to be a migrant: we now have for example 160,000 Polish people in Ireland ... more than there are of Wexford or Kerry or Mayo or Donegal people
• Ireland has about 125,000 lone parent families: in 2005 34% of births in the Republic were outside marriage
• In the Republic 7% of people (nearly 0.3m) and 10% of children (nearly 0.7m) are in Consistent Poverty
Education: as it is and as it’s changing
During the lifetime of Cumann na mBunscol primary education in Ireland has also changed dramatically. The change has been constant and has ranged across how people see education; how education is managed; the purpose and content of the curriculum; and the role of the teacher. Some of the consequences of this are:

- Curriculum pressures and overload and associated pressures on teachers: greater emphasis on the achievement of academic results
- Huge obligations in terms of health and safety and child protection
- Primary education rapidly becoming a “male-and-religious-order-free-zone”
- Limited availability of teachers and children after school hours
- The PE curriculum bringing in sports other than Gaelic games (albeit Gaelic games are seen to have a particular place): reduced time generally for Gaelic games
- Fewer teachers volunteering for “after school” activities
- Fewer teachers from a “traditional GAA background”
- Growing issues re discipline
- The rationalisation of schools in many areas

- There are around 585,000 primary school pupils in Ireland
- Of nearly 26,700 Primary teachers in the Republic, some 20,000 (80%) are women of 3,550 in training, 3,150 (89%) are women
- A third of the Republic’s primary schools have three teachers or fewer; a third have four to seven teachers, and a third have eight or more
- Over 1,200 of the Republic’s primary schools (37%) have women-only staff
- Primary teaching has been dominated by women for some time; in 1970, only 25% of the Republic’s primary teachers were men
- About 20% of Irish children are reckoned to be overweight

The GAA: as it is and as it’s changing
The GAA has always been in and of Ireland and for an organisation widely assumed to be traditional and even conservative, has consistently been one of our most dynamic and innovative organisations. The Association reflects much of the new Ireland but is equally good at holding to strategic positions and principles. The main GAA issues that influence Cumann na mBunscol have been identified as follows:

- Huge growth in the profile; popularity; and status of Gaelic games
- Increased “professionalization” at the higher levels, raising the risk of alienating and/or leaving behind the grass-roots
- The need to foster and grow Gaelic games in new urban settings
- The surge in interest in women’s football
- The new, iconic status of Croke Park
- Burn-out of the brightest and best and associated concerns that fun is being replaced by drudgery in the GAA
- Soaring sophistication in terms of coaching and player/team preparation
- Periodic lack of communication and collaboration between GAA colleagues
- The SRC recommendation that for children up to 14 the emphasis should be on coaching and regular games ... but based on participation, not competition

- The GAA has about 2,700 affiliated clubs; 583 (21%) in Ulster, 669 (25%) in Munster, 1076 (40%) in Leinster, 275 (10%) in Connacht, and 85 (3%) in Britain
- An estimated 0.5 million people in Ireland play Gaelic games regularly in a formal, structured way
- Over 2 million people attended the GAA inter-County Championships in 2005

The consultation processes/events used included discussions with the National Committee; a discussion with delegates at the September 2006 General Meeting; questionnaire surveys of primary teachers/schools (both those heavily involved and those not); and discussions with people across the GAA family. Finally, almost 80 people from all of those backgrounds, and representing 24 different Counties, all four Provinces and Britain, came together in a structured planning workshop held in Na Fianna GAC, Dublin in November 2006. In all, well over 200 people contributed directly to the analyses and discussions.

Meanwhile, the consultation input was informed and complemented by a number of analyses carried out in the background.

DEVELOPING THE STRATEGY
Why the work was done
After a third of a century it is very appropriate for any organisation to review itself and its work and to set out a strategic way ahead. In that understanding, Cumann na mBunscol was particularly keen to:

- Build on its achievements to date
- Respond to the many and significant changes in its working environments
- Take Gaelic games forward to best effect in the primary education setting.

It also recognized that it faced parallel issues in terms of both its image/identity and its own governance, i.e. how it does its business.

How the work was done
Cumann na mBunscol is, simply, in; of; and for both primary schools and the GAA. Any worthwhile strategic review and planning process had to reflect and capitalise on those realities. Accordingly, this Plan was developed out of a process led by a small planning group put in place by the National Committee. That process was substantively based on a widespread consultation which sought the views of:

- Those directly involved in managing and delivering Cumann na mBunscol
- Other primary teachers not as heavily involved
- Other GAA stakeholders
- People involved in other aspects of education
- People involved in other aspects of sport.

The consultation processes/events used included discussions with the National Committee; a discussion with delegates at the September 2006 General Meeting; questionnaire surveys of primary teachers/schools (both those heavily involved and those not); and discussions with people across the GAA family. Finally, almost 80 people from all of those backgrounds, and representing 24 different Counties, all four Provinces and Britain, came together in a structured planning workshop held in Na Fianna GAC, Dublin in November 2006. In all, well over 200 people contributed directly to the analyses and discussions.

CUMANN NA MBUNSCOL: THE STATE OF PLAY

The Core Issues
Cumann na mBunscol, through its own ongoing business and its periodic internal discussions, had already identified a number of strategic issues facing it and its work. The consultation feedback added to this and as the planning process developed, it became clear that Cumann na mBunscol’s future well-being was woven in and around eight frequently-related headings. Those headings form the framework around which this Strategic Plan is structured and are outlined briefly in turn below.

Coming to terms with the “new” Ireland
Ireland is no longer the country it was and will never return to being that country again. The main features of the new Ireland that Cumann na mBunscol needs to reflect are:

- it’s now a place of increased wealth ... but also one of, in places, acute poverty and social exclusion
- economic prosperity mean people have much less “non-work related” time
- greater mobility has significantly reduced people’s attachment-to-place
- family/household patterns continue to change and fluctuate, with consequences for primary school children
- a “me too” culture has emerged, bringing with it less interest in community and in volunteering
- teachers and others don’t have the status they once had.

In that Ireland, sport is increasingly seen as having a value well beyond games themselves. Sport, and particularly Gaelic sport, build social capital; improve health status; and provide important, structured frameworks for young people. The significance of Gaelic games is now greater than ever.

Being more inclusive
As Ireland changes it becomes much more diverse. The notion of equality runs through every sphere of activity, with its traditional ethical underpinnings now supported by the law of the land. For most of its life the GAA was essentially male; Catholic; and white ... and concerned with football and hurling. Cumann na mBunscol takes a particularly wide view of inclusion and the areas it now wants to look more closely at include:

- achieving a proper place for girls and women and their Gaelic games
- responding to ethnic minority children, welcoming and integrating them
- promoting and delivering rounders and handball as part of the GAA portfolio
- dealing with the culture/heritage aspects of the GAA in the primary school setting

The teacher gender (im)balance
Primary school teaching has been; is now; and will be for the foreseeable future, the realm of women, not men. Men still tend to dominate the management of primary schools but that too will rapidly change. The emerging issues here include:

- the need for Cumann na mBunscol to reflect a women-dominated profession
- making Gaelic games and their management more “women friendly”
- addressing gender stereotypes
- working more closely with those involved in teacher training.

Responding to the competition
Gaelic games are the core business of Cumann na mBunscol. And Gaelic games have many competitors, both sporting and otherwise. Most of these are commercially-based; have a global presence; and enjoy vast resources, financial and otherwise. Some, for example computer games, are more insidious and less obvious, but are competitors to Gaelic games nonetheless. Cumann na mBunscol is not about “defeating” any other sport or activity ... but it is about ensuring that Gaelic games and their uniqueness are not swamped or pushed aside by others who are more powerful in some ways.

Making GAA activity happen in primary schools
Good strategic analysis and thinking that lack implementation at the day-to-day level are of little value. Ultimately Cumann na mBunscol will be judged by the children and others on the basis of what they see delivered in and around the primary school setting. The key associated issues therefore include:

- fitting Gaelic games into an increasingly pressurised school day
- providing and funding equipment/gear for the games; accessing pitches; and obtaining transport
- “in school” coaching input
- moving beyond the games ... and reducing the emphasis on competition/winning

Marketing and promotion
Good products that are well-hidden benefit neither their producers nor their potential consumers. The marketing and promotion dimension cuts across virtually every one of the strategic issues discussed in this Section and is fundamentally central to the health of Cumann na mBunscol, its work, and Gaelic games generally in primary schools. The main sub-issues identified here include:

- the fact that Cumann na mBunscol has a number of target markets, e.g. children; teachers; parents; and others in the GAA
- its image and awareness levels
- promoting and celebrating Cumann na mBunscol and Gaelic games
- developing the role of sponsorship, including events and awards
- communication within and beyond Cumann na mBunscol

Cumann na mBunscol and the wider GAA
Cumann na mBunscol exists because the GAA exists. Its purpose is to promote and deliver Gaelic games. The GAA’s SRC report outlines many ways in which that can be done to better effect. Whilst it’s vital that both organisations should work hand-in-glove, in seamless ways, that hasn’t always been the case. That lack of synergy has been found at the National; Provincial; County; and local/Club levels. Among the areas to be addressed are:

- developing and maintaining Club/school links
- developing and maintaining County; Provincial; and GAA HQ links
- connections into/ liaison with second level education
- rolling out the Grassroots to National programme and other national GAA initiatives

“Minding our own business”: the governance of Cumann na mBunscol
The phrase “fit for purpose” now runs right across organisational life in Ireland. It’s a basic concept — essentially meaning that if the vehicle that delivers the business isn’t right, then neither will the business itself be as good as it should be. In organisational terms then, Cumann na mBunscol has to be as good as it can be. That means its governance, how it manages and delivers its business, is and will remain a core strategic issue. The main areas of focus here include:

- being “businesslike” and improving our business practices and procedures
- getting our fixtures; events; and activities right
- ensuring officer turnover/new blood
- introducing other dimensions to Cumann na mBunscol business, e.g. health and well-being
Our vision, mission and guiding principles

Cumann na mBunscol essentially works to a vision that is both ambitious and plainly put:

“To have Gaelic games the games of choice for Ireland’s primary school children”

It recognises that the achievement of this vision will of course require an input from many other GAA stakeholders. Cumann na mBunscol’s specific contribution – or its mission – will be:

“To foster, promote and deliver the national games to children, parents and teachers in the primary school setting, at the same time creating positive attitudes towards our national culture and heritage”

In taking forward this work, Cumann na mBunscol will be guided by a number of core principles. Those, which effectively govern “the way we do things around here”, are as follows:

• In all our work, the safety and well-being of the child will be paramount
• Our games will be delivered in an atmosphere of fun and enjoyment, one that is open and welcoming to all, regardless of background, tradition or ability: we will offer, not impose, Gaelic games
• We will continue to appreciate that Gaelic games are there to bring value to the children and to the school setting ... rather than vice versa
• We will work and liaise positively with other colleagues elsewhere ... in education; the GAA; other sports; and community and political life
• We will continue to sustain and acknowledge volunteerism
• Gaelic games and Irish culture will be seen as assets to be cherished and celebrated

Cumann na mBunscol’s plans to achieve its mission are outlined below.

Our Five Strategic Themes

Whilst the planning process teased out the various issues under eight different headings, it became apparent that the tasks needed to deliver Cumann na mBunscol’s ongoing well-being and effectiveness could most meaningfully be grouped under five different themes. These incorporate all the issues discussed earlier – for instance the teacher gender imbalance runs across all five – and can be represented as follows:

SWOT ANALYSIS

On the basis of the discussions in and around the areas outlined above, a SWOT analysis (Strengths; Weaknesses; Opportunities; and Threats) of Cumann na mBunscol was drawn up. It followed the traditional approach in that:

• Strengths and Weaknesses are things internal to Cumann na mBunscol, over which it has control
• Opportunities and Threats are external things ... over which it has no control but to which it must or should respond

| OUR STRATEGY TO SECURE THE NEXT GENERATION |

Our vision, mission and guiding principles

Cumann na mBunscol essentially works to a vision that is both ambitious and plainly put:

“To have Gaelic games the games of choice for Ireland’s primary school children”

It recognises that the achievement of this vision will of course require an input from many other GAA stakeholders. Cumann na mBunscol’s specific contribution – or its mission – will be:

“To foster, promote and deliver the national games to children, parents and teachers in the primary school setting, at the same time creating positive attitudes towards our national culture and heritage”

In taking forward this work, Cumann na mBunscol will be guided by a number of core principles. Those, which effectively govern “the way we do things around here”, are as follows:

• In all our work, the safety and well-being of the child will be paramount
• Our games will be delivered in an atmosphere of fun and enjoyment, one that is open and welcoming to all, regardless of background, tradition or ability: we will offer, not impose, Gaelic games
• We will continue to appreciate that Gaelic games are there to bring value to the children and to the school setting ... rather than vice versa
• We will work and liaise positively with other colleagues elsewhere ... in education; the GAA; other sports; and community and political life
• We will continue to sustain and acknowledge volunteerism
• Gaelic games and Irish culture will be seen as assets to be cherished and celebrated

Cumann na mBunscol’s plans to achieve its mission are outlined below.

Our Five Strategic Themes

Whilst the planning process teased out the various issues under eight different headings, it became apparent that the tasks needed to deliver Cumann na mBunscol’s ongoing well-being and effectiveness could most meaningfully be grouped under five different themes. These incorporate all the issues discussed earlier – for instance the teacher gender imbalance runs across all five – and can be represented as follows:
Theme 1: Reflecting the New Ireland and Including Everybody

Rationale

Cumann na mBunscol wants to reflect and respond to the realities of the new Ireland. It also wants to be inclusive ... and sees inclusion running across gender (both of teachers and pupils); ethnic minorities; people of different abilities; and the full spectrum of Gaelic games.

Theme 2: Making Gaelic Games Happen in Primary Schools

Rationale

The delivery of Gaelic games and associated activities within the primary school setting is the core business of Cumann na mBunscol. It is vital that this work is done effectively and efficiently.

Rationale
Cumann na mBunscol is not an end in itself. It is rather a means to an end ... that end being the development and delivery of Gaelic games and all the richness associated with them. It is simply vital that collaboration with the wider GAA underpins all our work.

MAKING THINGS HAPPEN

Implementation and Managing Performance

This strategic plan puts forward almost 50 actions under five strategic themes or headings. It also presents a number of guiding principles which will govern the way these actions are taken forward.

Cumann na mBunscol is very aware that a plan without implementation has no value. As people working in education we appreciate the importance of performance; of setting targets; and of working towards those targets. We also recognise the importance of discipline as a thread through all that work.

We have tried to make our Plan “SMART”, i.e. every action in it is Specific; Measurable; Agreed and Achievable; Relevant; and Timebound. To make sure we live up to the standards we have set, we intend to “performance manage” our business as follows:

- a Strategic Oversight Committee will be set up at National level
- that Committee will maintain an overview of the Plan’s implementation
- twice a year the Strategic Plan will form an agenda item at National Committee meetings
- the Strategic Oversight Committee will report on performance/progress at Cumann na mBunscol’s General Meeting in September each year
- the Plan will form an item for discussion at that Meeting
- each Provincial and County Coiste will, pending the development of their own Plans, be expected to formally assess their progress against the Plan at least once a year
- a clearly-specified project manager post will be created to manage the delivery of the plan for its first three years.

Cumann na mBunscol will seek, and then in turn allocate funding only on the basis of activity planned, or performance delivered, against the Strategic Plan.

Monitoring and Review

The approach outlined above will ensure the Plan is effectively monitored. A new material three years a formal review of the Plan will take place. This review will include another widespread consultation, both within and beyond Cumann na mBunscol.
